

September 22, 2009

Opticians Licensure - ROATX

Posted by Harry Chilinguerian in Home, September 22, 2009 @10:14 am

ROATx of the Registered Opticians Association of Texas is an organization that is always ready to advance, they have changed with the times and stand now as a model for many other optical state organizations. Many states hope to duplicate their success by emulating their strategies. I had the pleasure of meeting Sam Johnson the master optician who is the brains behind the operation a few years back. His speech was calm and collected, his height was average, it threw me off; my expectation was a large grizzly man that chewed nails and spit fire. Sam has managed to turn lemon into lemonade for years now, I once had a very respected and admired mentor of mine call him a pit bull, once he gets his mind around something he won't rest until he reaches success. Well Sam has his eye's on licensure in Texas and guess what it can't be but so far off if Sam has sunk his jaws into it. Check out their new site and become involved in their new efforts.:

<http://opticians-licensure.roatx.org/>